A Revision of the Auschwitz-Birkenau Concentration Camp Crematoriums.

There are many historians with a focus on the history of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp that claim the following incineration outputs by the crematoriums of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp without providing complete scientific, mathematical, and historical factual evidence to support the claims: -

- Crematorium I. – There are claims that the German authorities calculated 340 corpses could be incinerated every 24 hours after the installation of the three furnaces.

- Crematorium II. – There are claims that the German authorities calculated 1,440 corpses could be incinerated in this crematorium every 24 hours. The testimony of former prisoners claimed this number was higher.

- Crematorium III. – There are claims that the German authorities calculated 1,440 corpses could be incinerated in this crematorium every 24 hours. The testimony of former prisoners claimed this number was higher.

- Crematorium IV. – There are claims that the German authorities calculated 768 corpses could be incinerated in this crematorium every 24 hours. The testimony of former prisoners claimed this number was higher.

There is no evidence to prove that crematorium ovens with this output ever existed. Furthermore, there are claims that at times, thousands of bodies of the deceased were burned on pyres in pits located near Crematorium V. I can only find two photos that exist showing corpses being burned in open pits at the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp. These two images are taken at the same location on the same day and show a very unorganized open pit burning process that included no more than a dozen men burning no more than fifty bodies lying on the ground. It is not proven how any of the people died or that the corpses are deceased Jews. It can be noted that incinerating a human corpse inside a hole that is dug one metre into the ground is not economical or practical, and that the process does not destroy all the remains, especially considering there was a shallow water table in all the grounds around the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp. The water table fluctuated seasonally, with water table levels fluctuating between 0.30 and 1.20 meters from the surface, and the terrain was marshy most of the year around. Incinerating a carcass on a metal grate above a hole that is dug 1m into the ground is not economical or practical and does not destroy the remains. There is no evidence to show that either method was used to incinerate hundreds of thousands of corpses, both unabated and undetected, at any time, let alone over several years.

The following is a list of some other considerations during my research: -

- Only 363,000 Jews were reported to have been registered into Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp during the war.
- No photos showing groups of people being gassed in any gas chambers can be found.
- No photos showing the bodies of groups of people after being gassed in any gas chambers can be found.
- I can find no autopsies showing any deceased person had died from being gassed in any gas chambers.
- I can find no large fuel deposits on or next to the campgrounds that could be used for incinerating tens of thousands of bodies. The amount of combustible material required to burn more than one million bodies in the muffle-ovens has not been proven to have ever been delivered to the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp
- To stop the outbreak of diseases that were reported to have killed tens of thousands of people in the concentration camps, the Kommandanturstab (camp administration) had to have the bodies incinerated quickly, justifying the need for several crematorium to be operating simultaneously.
- The allies listening into the communications of the German armed forces and the German high command using the enigma decipher of the German armed forces never once heard orders or communications about exterminating the Jewish population.
- The Allies only found concentration camps and no death camps. The Russian Communists only found death camps, and no concentration camps.
- Upon liberating the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp, the Russian forces found thousands of prisoners that were elderly Jewish men, Jewish women, and Jewish children. The same profiled prisoners that are widely cited as being exterminated upon arrival at the camp, but for some reason these prisoners were not killed. The images of the Jewish children standing at the fence line of the camp show them all looking to be well fed and in good health.

- There is only one mass grave reported to have been found at the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp that contained 700 bodies.
- During World War II, only 1.8% of the population of Russia were Jewish, yet about 40% of high-ranking NKVD officers had Jewish nationality recorded in their identity documents, and more than half of the NKVD generals were of Jewish origin. This indicates a significant presence of Jewish individuals in the leadership of the NKVD.
- The Russian Communists did not allow any Allied officers into the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp until ten years after the seizure by Russian Communists troops. Many alterations had been made to the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp complex by the time Allied officers were allowed into for inspection.
- The fatality figures calculated by the Internation Red Cross report that 300,000 people died in the concentration camps due to persecution based on race, religion, and politics. Not all those 300,000 who died were Jews.
- Both the Russian Communists and Allied forces had captured all the official letterheads, stamps, and stationary of German high command and German Army administration intact and were able to produce fabricated documentation to their discretion during and after the war.

The Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp is reported in a common narrative to have disposed of between 1,100,000 and 2,500,000 corpses over 5 years. None of the crematoriums operated for 5 years. The longest operating crematorium was Crematorium I that operated for less than 3 years (34 months). The other four Crematoriums each only operated from between 18 months to 2 years two years in total. There was a total of 42 muffle-ovens in operation at various times during the operational existence of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp. The following observations can now be made -

- To incinerate 1,100,000 human corpses over 5 years (1825 Days) it requires at least 50 ovens going nonstop, without any cooling down time, cleaning time, or reload time. (1,100,000 ÷ 21,900 = 50.2283105). If there is an allowance for cooling down time, cleaning time, and reload time then the number of required ovens to achieve this number of incinerations would double to 100 ovens.

- To incinerate 2,500,000 human corpses over 5 years (1825 Days) it requires at least 114 ovens going nonstop, without any cooling down time, cleaning time, or reload time. (2,500,000 ÷ 21,900 = 114.155251). If there is an allowance for cooling down time, cleaning time, and reload time, then the number of required ovens to achieve this number of incinerations would double to 228 ovens.

The following calculation revisions for the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp crematoriums are my own. All calculations were made within the boundaries of science and historical factual evidence. These calculations do not dismiss or deny the fact that many people from all denominations were killed in the concentration camps that were administrated by the Kommandanturstab (camp administration).

The standard time for the complete cremation of a single corpse in a crematoria oven is two hours. After each cremation, there would be a need to allow for the time it takes to cool each oven down, the time it takes to clean out the several kilos of ash and bones that remains, and the time it takes to insert the next corpse for incineration. The following calculations do not have any allowance for the cooling down time, the cleaning time, or reload time. These calculations are only for the burn time: -

- 12 corpses, per oven, per day. (24 hrs ÷ 2hrs).
- 84 corpses, per oven, per week. (168 hrs ÷ 2hrs).
- 4,380 corpses, per oven, per year. (8,760 hrs ÷ by 2hrs).
- 21,900 corpses, per oven, over 5 years. (43,800 hrs ÷ 2hrs).

If multiple corpses are put into a cremation oven, the burn time increases by 2 hours for each corpse being cremated in each cremation oven. E.G. Two corpses will take 4 hours to burn; Three corpses will take 6 hours to burn; and so forth.

The maximum capacity during the operational existence of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp crematoriums; without any allowance for the cooling down times, the cleaning times, or reload times; are as follows -

Crematorium I.

Operated from August 15, 1940, until July 1943. (1050 Days).
Contained 3 x "2-Muffle" Ovens. (6 Ovens).
Daily capability = 6 ovens x 12 corpses. (72 corpses per day).
Total output = 75,600 corpses. (1050 days x 72 corpses per day).

Crematorium II.

Operated from March 1943 until November 1944. (640 Days).
Contained 5 x "3-Muffle" Ovens. (15 Ovens).
Daily capability = 15 ovens x 12 corpses. (180 corpses per day).
Total output = 115,200 corpses (640 days x 180 corpses per day).

Crematorium III.

Operated from June 1943 until November 1944. (548 Days).
Contained 5 x "3-Muffle" Ovens (15 Ovens).
Daily capability = 15 Ovens x 12 corpses. (180 corpses per day).
Total cremations possible = 98,640 corpses (548 days x 180 per day).

Crematorium IV.

Operated from March 1943 until October 7, 1944. (586 Days).
Contained 1 x "8-Muffle" Ovens (8 ovens).
Daily capability = 8 ovens x 12 corpses. (96 per day).
Total cremations possible = 56,256 corpses (586 days x 96 per day).

Crematorium V.

Operated from April 1943 until January 1945. (671 Days).
Contained 1 x "8-Muffle" Ovens (8 ovens).
Daily capability = 8 ovens x 12 corpses. (96 per day).
Total cremations possible = 64,416 corpses (671 days x 96 per day).

A Revision of the Auschwitz-Birkenau Concentration Camp Crematoriums.

Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp crematoriums

Total ovens = 42 ovens.
(6 + 15 + 15 + 8 + 8 = 42 ovens.)

Total Cremations = 410,112 corpses.
(75,600 + 115,200 + 98,640 + 56,256 + 64,416 = 410,112 corpses)

To throw fuel into the fire of free thinking, the crematoriums of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp were reported to have only operated for 12 hours of any given day due to the cooling down times, the cleaning times, or reload times. Because of this 12-hour operating time per oven due to the cooling down times, the cleaning times, or reload times, it can be calculated that the number of corpses that were possibly incinerated during the operating existence of all the crematoriums combined was 205,056 corpses (410,112 ÷ 2 = 205,056). This concludes that the number of incinerations in the crematoriums of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp was between 205,056 corpses to 410,112 corpses, based on science, mathematics, and the historical factual evidence that has been provided by the liberating forces. This calculatable range for the numbers of incinerations that were possible falls within the range of the report that 363,000 Jews were registered into Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp during the operational existence of the Auschwitz-Birkenau concentration camp.
